

Every cat is unique.

That's why their vaccination regime should be too

Some cat vaccines need to be given every year, but some vaccines can now protect against feline panleucopenia for three years. And still others are designed to protect against specific threats, which your cat may only face in certain situations depending on lifestyle or environment.

All these recent advances in cat vaccination add up to the fact that, these days, no cat needs to be vaccinated more than is absolutely necessary for protection.

That's why, depending on your cat's lifestyle, we'll always design the most efficient vaccination regime as shown in the table below.

	Cat lives alone	Cat lives with or encounters other cats
Cat does not go to shows or catteries	Nobivac Tricat	Nobivac Tricat (or Forcat) + FeLV
Cat goes to shows or catteries or is in contact with dogs	Nobivac Tricat + Nobivac Bb for Cats	Nobivac Tricat (or Forcat) + FeLV + Bb for Cats
